HOT OFF THE PRESS

New Version of Form I-9 Released: The U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) has released a new version of Form I-9 (Employment Eligibility Verification). Dated November 14, 2016, the form includes several changes, including prompts to ensure information is entered correctly, the ability to enter multiple preparers and translators, a dedicated area for additional information, and a supplemental page for the preparer/translator. According to the USCIS, the revised form is easier to complete on a computer and streamlines the certification process for certain foreign nationals. Employers are required to use the new form by January 22, 2017. Until then, employers can either continue to use the version dated March 8, 2013 or use the updated form.
